Meſſieurs Childs and Swaine,

IT is ſomewhat extraordinary, that the ſpirit of jealouſy, and faction, which ſhewed itſelf heretofore with the greateſt caution and with decency—ſince the arrival of the French Ambaſſador has broke out, with volcanic fury, threatening the Preſident, the Secretary of the Treaſury, and other officers in its way, in ſhort the government itſelf, with annihilation. The intimate and almoſt exclusive connection Mr. Genet, it is ſaid, has formed, with certain deſigning reſtleſs and ambitious men to the ſouthward, has induced a rational belief, independent of other circumſtances, that either the French Ambaſſador has become the dupe of a party, or that he meditates through it, againſt America, ſome deſigns as yet unpenetrated—and unaccountable. Becauſe we cannot ſee a ſingle advantage to be propoſed either to himſelf, or the people who ſent him here—by alienating the regards of nine tenths of a community, who unmindful of their own internal diſſentions, have uniformly, and at the preſent moment are teſtifying their regard to the cauſe of his country, by every expreſſion of enthuſiaſtick attachment—Some men have certain predominent natural propenſities which will diſcover themſelves in every ſituation they can be placed—

Arnold is ſaid to have been always a diſhoneſt, huckeying man.—To theſe propenſities he ſacrificed his fame, and would have ſacrificed his fellow ſoldiers, and countrymen.—Dumourier, though a man of great abilities—was known to be deſtitute of moral character, and therefore trotted with diffidence.—His predominant vices, tarniſhed all his glory—in attempting to betray to the deſpots of Europe, the liberties of his fellow-citizens;—and thus, other men, not engaged in cabals and intrigue, are as miſerable as fiſh out of the water.

It is ſuppoſed the following propoſitions do in reality form the political bible of every honeſt and unparty influenced—inhabitant of the United States.

1. That a ſtate of War, internal or external, is a ſtate of calamity—never to be courted—but always to be avoided, unleſs induced by the abſolute neceſſity of ſelf-defence.

2. That Americans, under their exiſting conſtitutions, are the moſt happy, free, enlightened, and proſperous people, on the face of the earth.

3. That ſuch being their ſituation, it is their duty and intereſt to abſtain from wars, both foreign and domeſtic—to maintain and cultivate the bleſſings of peace, with all the world—and eſpecially, by the moſt circumſpect, wiſe and prudent conduct, ſo to act, as by obſerving an impartial neutrality, with reſpect to the preſent belligerent powers of Europe, not to be drawn into the vortex of their politics.

4. That it is to the honour and advantage, of all governments, and eſpecially of the United States of America, as being the youngeſt on the liſt of nations, to perpetuate the glory they acquire, in the eſtabliſhment of independance, by the faithful obſervance of public treaties.

5. That it would moſt probably be our beſt policy, like the Chineſe, to have no treaties, or ſtipulated communication with the nations ſeparated from us by oceans, but thoſe which ſhould naturally ariſe out of commerce, the arts, and ſciences.

6. That as in the federal government, all lawful authority is veſted in, and can therefore only be exerciſed in, by, and through the Houſe of Repreſentatives, Senate and Preſident. All acts of the people, in their individual capacities, aſſuming Legiſlative, judicial, or executive powers, are incompatible with the authority, conſtitutionally and freely, inveſted by them, in their Repreſentatives: And are null and void.

7. That Americans being a conſiderate and wiſe people—Whenever they diſcover deficiency in their Magiſtrates, laws, or Conſtitution—they ought to ſeek redreſs and amendment, in a peaceable way, by ſolicitude and perſeverance, tempered by prudence.

8. That it is the undoubted right of the Citizen, upon a ſuppoſed injury, to think, ſpeak, deliberate, petition, addreſs, and remonſtrate.

That frequent and free elections, when unaffected by bribery and corruption, and uninfluenced by party, and the intrigues of artful and deſigning individuals, are the greateſt and certain ſecurities againſt the invaſion of our liberties, by the ſervants of the public, and others—and ought therefore to be guarded and maintained inviolate.

9. That having a government, and officers of that government, who are by the known laws of the land reſponſible for their conduct—Whilſt the one exiſts, and the others are in office, they ought to be ſupported—they ought not to be inſulted: But when guilty of crimes or miſdemeanors, arreſted, tried, adjudged and puniſhed, by the tribunals for that purpoſe conſtitutionally eſtabliſhed.

10. That our fellow-citizen, GEORGE WASHINGTON, a native of America, being elected General of the Armies of the United States of America, by the unanimous ſuffrages of Congreſs, in the late conteſt for Freedom with the government of Great-Britain: Having conducted himſelf, during that long, eventful, and bloody war, with unexampled firmneſs, diſintereſted patriotiſm and valour; perhaps unexceeded in the annals of mankind; having, Cincinnatus like, returned victorious over his enemies to the plow: Having again been called out by the unanimous will of his fellow-citizens, to accept the chief Executive of our extenſive and complicated Republic: And having in this capacity, amidſt the clamours of diſcordant parties, conducted the public weal, without the leaſt imputation of [illegible] few factious, envious, and ambitious Traitors, who forever exiſt in every community—he is entitled to the moſt grateful affection, and ſupport of all his countrymen.

11. That the Citizens of the United States are free and independent. That they are capable, and have the ſole right to judge and determine of the conduct of all their public officers.

12. That any attempt by foreigners, in whatever character they appear, in the ſmalleſt degree to interfere with the local politics or parties of our country, or to inſult the Executive Authority of the Federal, or any of the State governments, is an immediate inſult to theſe governments, as well as the governed; and ought to be treated with the contempt, and prompt chaſtiſement, due from all ſovereign nations to the authors of ſuch temerity.

13. That if the Ambaſſador from France has been guilty of indignities to the Executive of our government, which is reported; and is inveighing, or is inveigled, into any of the prevailing parties in our country, he muſt certainly be ſituated by improper motives—muſt loſe all uſefulneſs to Us, or his conſtituents—muſt be a dangerous man—ought to be ſhunned as peſtilential—and ought to be returned from whence he came, with all the expedition conſiſtent with the uſage of nations.

14. That having underſtood from this Ambaſſador's own declaration, that the Republic of France does not wiſh us to take a part in the preſent war with the Tyrants of Europe—and finding at the ſame time, that this Ambaſſador ſhews a diſpoſition to aid and influence the ſpirit of diſcord exiſting in the Union—and all this at a time when, however we differ about our own municipal intereſts, there is unequivocal and daily teſtimony given, of our being united in almoſt a frantic partiality to the cauſe of his countrymen. I ſay, we have but one of two concluſions to draw from this conduct, viz. Either that the French have ſome unhappy deſign upon our country; or that this inconſiſtency ariſes from the weakneſs, miſjudged, and unauthoriſed policy, or naturally unfortunate propenſity in the individual for intrigue and cabal: The firſt ſeems impoſſible, the latter is moſt probable.

15. That until theſe things are cleared up, or better underſtood, it is premature to addreſs the French Republic, through this Ambaſſador, and will be derogatory to the honor of the United States.

16. That the late proclamation of the Preſident to the Citizens of the United States, to [illegible] a ſtrict neutrality, &c. was another inſtance of his watchful and paternal affection, for the true intereſts and happineſs of his fellow-citizens.

That this proclamation was not an act of Legiſlation, that it was meant for, and could poſſibly amount to no more than a friendly monition to all, and eſpecially to thoſe who being influenced by extravagant attachment to the French, or prompted by inordinate proſpects of gain, would, regardleſs of the general advantage and ſafety of the commonwealth, have covered the ocean with American privateers—and led us head long, with all our ſins and debts, upon our backs, into an unprofitable and ruinous war with England, Spain, Portugal, and Holland.

17. That tho' it could have made no eſſential difference otherwiſe—it would poſſibly—have eaſed the minds of a few weak, or have ſtopped the mouths of a few deſigning reſtleſs men—if the Preſident in his Proclamation had adverted to the treaties with France and other nations.

18. That from the uniformly patriotic conduct of the Preſident of the United States. We have not the leaſt reaſon to ſuſpect that ever he has or will knowingly purſue meaſures either in a public, or private reſpect, injurious to his country—That he has not manifeſted in any inſtance, a want of attachment to the French Republic—but upon every proper occaſion which has occurred the very reverſe—that the ſame will be the conduct of Congreſs when convened—That we ought to love General Waſhington, and do love him—And any man who dares to inſult, or report evil of him, muſt be a bad man, and ought to meet with chaſtiſement and contempt from every freeman of America, who wiſhes a continuation of the bleſſings of Proſperity and Peace.

The reſidue reſpecting the violation of treaties by the Convention—in the next, from your Fellow Citizen.

June 8. Monday morning ſailed from Port Royal his Majeſty's ſhip Providence, Capt Bligh. We learn that, independent of the Bread Fruit, and other plants from the South Seas, and the collection of St. Vincent plants, made by Dr. Anderſon, there are on board for the Kew gardens near one thouſand plants, natives of this iſland; the greateſt part of them ſuch as have never been introduced into a garden in England. To them are added, a very extenſive collection of ſeeds, moſtly of annual plants, which cannot be ſent in any other way. Should theſe arrive ſafe, the Kew gardens may boaſt the richeſt collection of Weſt India plants in Europe, not excepting that in the imperial garden at Vienna, which hitherto ſtood unrivalled, and which was made by two [illegible]

June 15. It is confidently aſſerted, that ſo great is the ſcarcity of proviſions at the north ſide, that the homeward bound ſhips find a difficulty in procuring, at any price, a ſufficiency for the voyage: And if we may judge from the ſudden riſe in our price current of flour, ſhip bread and rice, the great mart of Kingſton is not much better provided. In remarking on the above, a correſpondent obſerves, for the conſideration of thoſe in power, that if ever a relaxation of our navigation laws were juſtifiable, it might be deemed ſo under the exiſting circumſtances.

NEW-YORK, Auguſt 7.

At a meeting of the New-York CHAMBER of COMMERCE, legally convened on the 6th day of Auguſt, 1793, the Chamber proceeded to conſider the report of the Committee, appointed at a previous meeting to frame reſolutions expreſſive of the ſenſe of this Corporation upon the conduct which it is their duty to obſerve, in reſpect to the powers at war, when the following were unanimouſly adopted;

1ſt. Reſolved, That a ſtrict obſervance of exiſting treaties, and of the neutrality enjoined by the Preſident's Proclamation, is in our opinion among the firſt duties which we owe to ourſelves, and to the mild government adopted by our country.

2d. Reſolved, That in our opinion it is contrary to the tenor of thoſe treaties, and the laws of the land, to engage on board of any letter of marque or privateer, or to aſſiſt in arming or fitting out veſſels to cruize againſt any of the powers at war; and that it is the duty of all good citizens to unite their efforts to bring offenders in theſe reſpects to conviction and puniſhment.

3d. Reſolved, That the Proclamation of the Preſident of the United States, declaring their neutrality towards the powers at war, was in our opinion a meaſure wiſely calculated to promote the intereſts and preſerve the tranquility of our country; and that we conſider the ſame as a new proof of that watchful regard for the honour and proſperity of the nation, which has uniformly diſtinguiſhed the adminiſtration of our firſt magiſtrate.

4th. Reſolved, That the Preſident of the United States is the only organ through which the national will can be made known to foreign powers; and that any attempt of ſaid powers, or their miniſters, to communicate with this country, upon national objects, otherwiſe than through him, is an indignity to our conſtitution, an offence to the nation, and ought to excite the apprehenſion and diſpleaſure of all good and orderly citizens. By order of the Corporation.

BOSTON, July 24.

At a very full and reſpectable meeting of the Merchants, and others concerned in trade, reſiding in Boſton and convened at Faneuil-Hall, by Public Notification, on Monday, July 22, 1793.

VOTED,—That, in the opinion of this body, the Preſident's late Proclamation, declaring the United States to be in a ſtate of Neutrality, and calling on the citizens to conduct accordingly, was a wiſe and prudent meaſure, well-timed, founded on fact, and calculated to ſecure the honor, and to promote the true intereſts and happineſs of our country.

VOTED,—That, in our opinion therefore, an attentive conformity to the laws of Neutrality, and the obligations of exiſting Treaties, is the indiſpenſible duty of all good citizens; and we conceive that to promote it, was the primary object of that Proclamation.

And in order to preſerve that ſtate of Neutrality, ſo important to the intereſt and honor of this country,

Voted,—That ſhould any Citizen of the United States become intereſted in, or fit out any Privateer or armed Veſſel, to cruize againſt either of the Belligerent Powers the other Citizens of the United States ought to uſe their endeavors, to bring him to condign puniſhment, for ſuch atrocious breach of the laws of Nations, and the rules of Neutrality.

VOTED,—That to prevent and diſcourage, as far as we can, ſuch criminal conduct, We will give our utmoſt aid to detect and bring to legal puniſhment, thoſe who ſhall be guilty of it.

VOTED,—That a Committee, conſiſting of the Hon. Thomas Ruſſell, Stephen Higginſon, John C. Jones, Eſq'rs. Mr. Nathaniel Fellows, Mr. Samuel Brown, Dr. Charles Jarvis, and Mr. Eben Parſons, be appointed to have theſe Reſolutions printed in the ſeveral newſpapers; and to tranſmit copies, to the other ſeaports in this ſtate, deſiring their concurrence, if they conceive them adopted to promote the public good.

Messieurs Childs and Swains,

IT is somewhat extraordinary, that the spirit of jealousy, and faction, which shewed itself heretofore with the greatest caution and with decency—since the arrival of the French Ambassador has broke out, with volcanic fury, threatening the President, the Secretary of the Treasury, and other officers in its way, in short the government itself, with annihilation. The intimate and almost exclusive connection Mr. Genet, it is said, has formed, with certain designing restless and ambitious men to the southward, has induced a rational belief, independent of other circumstances, that either the French Ambassador has become the dupe of a party, or that he meditates through it, against America, some designs as yet unpenetrated—and unaccountable. Because we cannot see a single advantage to be proposed either to himself, or the people who sent him here—by alienating the regards of nine tenths of a community, who unmindful of their own internal dissentions, have uniformly, and at the present moment are testifying their regard to the cause of his country, by every expression of enthusiastick attachment—Some men have certain predominent natural propensities which will discover themselves in every situation they can be placed—

Arnold is said to have been always a dishonest, jockeying man.—To these propensities he sacrificed his fame, and would have sacrificed his fellow soldiers, and countrymen.—Dumourier, though a man of great abilities—was known to be destitute of moral character, and therefore trusted with diffidence.—His predominant vices, tarnished all his glory—in attempting to betray to the despots of Europe, the liberties of his fellow-citizens;—and thus, other men, not engaged in cabals and intrigue, are as miserable as fish out of the water.

It is supposed the following propositions do in reality form the political bible of every honest and unparty influenced—inhabitant of the United States.

1. That a state of War, internal or external, is a state of calamity—never to be courted—but always to be avoided, unless induced by the absolute necessity of self-defence.

2. That Americans, under their existing constitutions, are the most happy, free, enlightened, and prosperous people, on the face of the earth.

3. That such being their situation, it is their duty and interest to abstain from wars, both foreign and domestic—to maintain and cultivate the blessings of peace, with all the world—and especially, by the most circumspect, wise and prudent conduct, so to act, as by observing an impartial neutrality, with respect to the present belligerent powers of Europe, not to be drawn into the vortex of their politics.

4. That it is to the honour and advantage, of all governments, and especially of the United States of America, as being the youngest on the list of nations, to perpetuate the glory they acquire, in the establishment of independance, by the faithful observance of public treaties.

5. That it would most probably be our best policy, like the Chinese, to have no treaties, or stipulated communication with the nations separated from us by oceans, but those which should naturally arise out of commerce, the arts, and sciences.

6. That as in the federal government, all lawful authority is vested in, and can therefore only be exercised in, by, and through the House of Representatives, Senate and President. All acts of the people, in their individual capacities, assuming Legislative, judicial, or executive powers, are incompatible with the authority, constitutionally and freely, invested by them, in their Representatives: And are null and void.

7. That Americans being a considerate and wise people—Whenever they discover deficiency in their Magistrates, laws, or Constitution—they ought to seek redress and amendment, in a peaceable way, by solicitude and perseverance, tempered by prudence.

8. That it is the undoubted right of the Citizen, upon a supposed injury, to think, speak, deliberate, petition, address, and remonstrate.

That frequent and free elections, when unaffected by bribery and corruption, and uninfluenced by party, and the intrigues of artful and designing individuals, are the greatest and certain securities against the invasion of our liberties, by the servants of the public, and others—and ought therefore to be guarded and maintained inviolate.

9. That having a government, and officers of that government, who are by the known laws of the land responsible for their conduct—Whilst the one exists, and the others are in office, they ought to be supported—they ought not to be insulted: But when guilty of crimes or misdemeanors, arrested, tried, adjudged and punished, by the tribunals for that purpose constitutionally established.

10. That our fellow-citizen, GEORGE WASHINGTON, a native of America, being elected General of the Armies of the United States of America, by the unanimous suffrages of Congress, in the late contest for Freedom with the government of Great-Britain: Having conducted himself, during that long, eventful, and bloody war, with unexampled firmness, disinterested patriotism and valour; perhaps unexceeded in the annals of mankind; having, Cincinnatus like, returned victorious over his enemies to the plow: Having again been called out by the unanimous wish of his fellow-citizens, to accept the chief Executive of our extensive and complicated Republic: And having in this capacity, amidst the clamours of discordant parties, conducted the public weal, without the least impeachment of his political integrity, unless it be by the anonymous shafts of a few factious, envious, and ambitious Traitors, who forever exist in every community—he is entitled to the most grateful affection, and support of all his countrymen.

11. That the Citizens of the United States are free and independent. That they are capable, and have the sole right to judge and determine of the conduct of all their public officers.

12. That any attempt by foreigners, in whatever character they appear, in the smallest degree to interfere with the local politics or parties of our country, or to insult the Executive Authority of the Federal, or any of the State governments, is an immediate insult to these governments, as well as the governed; and ought to be treated with the contempt, and prompt chastisement, due from all sovereign nations to the authors of such temerity.

13. That if the Ambassador from France has been guilty of indignities to the Executive of our government, which is reported; and is inveighing, or is inveigled, into any of the prevailing parties in our country, he must certainly be actuated by improper motives—must lose all usefulness to Us, or his constituents—must be a dangerous man—ought to be shunned as pestilential—and ought to be returned from whence he came, with all the expedition consistent with the usage of nations.

14. That having understood from this Ambassador's own declaration, that the Republic of France does not wish us to take a part in the present war with the Tyrants of Europe—and finding at the same time, that this Ambassador shews a disposition to aid and inflame the spirit of discord existing in the Union—and all this at a time when, however we differ about our own municipal interests, there is unequivocal and daily testimony given, of our being united in almost a frantic partiality to the cause of his countrymen. I say, we have but one of two conclusions to draw from this conduct, viz. Either that the French have some unhappy design upon our country; or that this inconsistency arises from the weakness, misjudged, and unauthorised policy, or naturally unfortunate propensity in the individual for intrigue and cabal: The first seems impossible, the latter is most probable.

15. That until these things are cleared up, or better understood, it is premature to address the French Republic, through this Ambassador, and will be derogatory to the honor of the United States.

16. That the late proclamation of the President to the Citizens of the United States, to observe a strict neutrality, &c. was another instance of his watchful and paternal affection, for the true interests and happiness of his fellow-citizens.

That this proclamation was not an act of Legislation, that it was meant for, and could possibly amount to no more than a friendly monition to all, and especially to those who being influenced by extravagant attachment to the French, or prompted by inordinate prospects of gain, would, regardless of the general advantage and felicity of the commonwealth, have covered the ocean with American privateers—and led us head long, with all our sins and debts, upon our backs, into an unprofitable and ruinous war with England, Spain, Portugal, and Holland.

17. That tho' it could have made no essential difference otherwise—it would possibly—have eased the minds of a few weak, or have stopped the mouths of a few designing restless men—if the President in his Proclamation had adverted to the treaties with France and other nations.

18. That from the uniformly patriotic conduct of the President of the United States. We have not the least reason to suspect that ever he has or will knowingly pursue measures either in a public, or private respect, injurious to his country—That he has not manifested in any instance, a want of attachment to the French Republic—but upon every proper occasion which has occurred the very reverse—that the same will be the conduct of Congress when convened—That we ought to love General Washington, and do love him—And any man who dares to insult, or report evil of him, must be a bad man, and ought to meet with chastisement and contempt from every freeman of America, who wishes a continuation of the blessings of Prosperity and Peace.

The residue respecting the violation of treaty by the Convention—in the next, from your Fellow Citizen.

PITTSBURG, August 3.

Four boats arrived here on Wednesday last from Fort-Washington—we hear that great preparations are making, and large quantities of provisions, &c. laying in at the different frontier garrisons, which seems to indicate a campaign this fall, provided a peace is not made—It is also said 2000 militia from Kentucky, under Gen. Scott, will accompany our army, if a campaign takes place.

RICHMOND, August 7.

The following inhumane circumstance took place not long since at Martinique. A party of English and Antifocrats having captured about thirty Patriots, made them march out, one by one, and shot them down.—The Barbarian thinking to excite compassion, took a child in his arms, but the unfeeling monsters shot them both.

PHILADELPHIA, August 7.

A gentleman of character who has just arrived from Germany, brings the following important intelligence to the friends of liberty and equality: That in the middle of the tenth of May last, one of the most respectable merchants of Berlin (the residence of the king of Prussia) put the following inscription over his door, in golden characters: Liberty, Equality, and the Rights of Man. His Majesty was immediately informed thereof, but thro' fear of his own subjects, suffered it to remain unnoticed. A remarkable circumstance which renders it probable, that this debilitated voluptuary will soon experience a similar fate with Louis the XVIth. This gentleman further relates that his majesties have already made such drafts upon his treasury that it is nearly exhausted, and they have debilitated his body, whilst hereditary prince, to such a degree, that epileptic fits are his daily portion, and his inability to govern at present the greatest misfortune to his subjects. The same gentleman adds, that the combined armies are in the greatest want of money, provisions and supplies of all kinds; whereas the French have every thing in abundance, and that the spirit of liberty and equality is still making incredible progress in the German empire.

AUTHENTIC MERCANTILE INFORMATION.

It has been said, that the last arrivals from France make no mention of a decree of the National Convention relative to goods belonging to their enemies, found on board neutral vessels. From the Chronique de Paris, however, a very respectable paper edited by two members of the Convention, we translate the following article. Gen. Adv.

"The English government appear desirous of treating republicans as wild beasts, who are to be brought to submit through hunger only; for they have ordered neutral vessels, loaded with provisions for our ports, to be stopt. If ever reprisals are warranted, it is when the necessaries of life are to be provided. The Convention has decreed this day, Thursday, May 9th, upon the report of their Committee of Marine, that the French ships of war and privateers may stop, and send into the ports of the republic, all vessels belonging to neutral powers, laden in the whole or in part with provisions for our Enemies."

The collection in this city, for the relief of the unfortunate St. Domingo sufferers, independent of the Theatre, and Circus benefits, and of the collection made by the French Patriotic Society, already exceeds 10,000 dollars. The subscription is not yet completed, and will probably produce 3000 more.

Captain Watson of the schooner Dolphin, arrived here on Tuesday, with 67 passengers from Cape Francois. On the passage she was boarded by a Bermuda privateer, commanded by one M'Dougal, who plundered the passengers of ten thousand dollars property, in plate and money.

NEW-YORK, August 8.

CITIZEN GENET arrived here yesterday, at 12 o'clock: His arrival was announced by the ringing of bells, and the firing of cannon: He was received at the battery, by the Committee appointed to present him the address voted on Thursday last, and conducted to the New Coffee-House, and from thence to his lodgings in Maiden-Lane.

The following is the Address which was presented to Citizen GENET, on his arrival in this city, yesterday:

"CITIZEN,

"WE are deputed by and have the honor to address you in the name of the Republicans of this Metropolis. Informed of your arrival in our country, we have been long earnestly wishing to receive you as the Representative of a nation struggling in the glorious cause of Freedom and Humanity;—of a nation animated by sentiments too congenial with our own, not to excite the warmest sympathy of friendship and exultation.

"'Tis true we feel the distresses of your country, we lament the blood of patriot heroes, and the miseries of the innocent, by the obstinacy of pride and the cruelty of ambition. But liberty is too valuable not to be purchased at any price; and we are not to damp the joy inspired on this occasion, by recalling to mind at present what our own liberties have cost us, or the immense sacrifices made by your countrymen on the altar of freedom.

"We confidently trust, that under the guidance, of a benign, though unfrenzied arm, the political circumstances of mankind are rapidly meliorating and improving, that the Republic of France is made a most distinguished instrument in this great, this godlike work; and we should do violence to our feelings, were we not to seize an occasion like the present, to manifest to the world, how much we are interested in the dawn of universal happiness, in the triumph of Liberty, and in its certain consequences, the peace and prosperity of nations.

"From the timely aid of France, these United States have been brought to the full enjoyment of the blessings of Civil Liberty.

"The services of your countrymen, in the hour of our distress, were essential, and were cheerfully rendered, and the despots may absurdly claim the merit of them.

PITTSBURG, August 3.

Four boats arrived here on Wednesday last from Fort-Washington—we hear that great preparations are making, and large quantities of provisions, &c. laying in at the different frontier garrisons, which seems to indicate a campaign this fall, provided a peace is not made.—It is also said 2000 militia from Kentucky, under Gen. Scott, will accompany our army, if a campaign takes place.

RICHMOND, August 7.

The following inhumane circumstance took place not long since at Martinique. A party of English and Aristocrats having captured about thirty Patriots, made them march out, one by one, and shot them down.—The last man thinking to excite compassion, took a child in his arms, but the unfeeling monsters shot them both.

PHILADELPHIA, August 7.

A gentleman of character who has just arrived from Germany, brings the following important intelligence to the friends of liberty and equality: That in the middle of the tenth of May last, one of the most respectable merchants of Berlin (the residence of the king of Prussia) put the following inscription over his door, in golden characters: Liberty, Equality, and the Rights of Man. His Majesty was immediately informed thereof, but thro' fear of his own subjects, suffered it to remain unnoticed. A remarkable circumstance which renders it probable, that this debilitated voluptuary will soon experience a similar fate with Louis the XVIth. This gentleman further relates that his misdeeds have already made such drafts upon his treasury that it is nearly exhausted, and they have debilitated his body, whilst hereditary prince, to such a degree, that epileptic fits are his daily portion, and his inability to govern at present the greatest misfortune to his subjects. The same gentleman adds, that the combined armies are in the greatest want of money, provisions and supplies of all kinds; whereas the French have every thing in abundance, and that the spirit of liberty and equality is still making incredible progress in the German empire.

We recognize in the defenders of their own, the defenders of our rights, and in the patriots of France, the benefactors of America.

"We, this day tender to you our hearts, and through you to your nation, our warm and undisguised affections. Be assured, sir, we are both ready and willing to tender you every service and assistance, consistent with our reciprocal welfare and with the duty we owe our country; nay more exultingly would we sacrifice a liberal portion of our dearest interests, could there result in your behalf an adequate advantage.

"The voice of our government has through its Executive, declared the neutrality of the United States, as relative to all acts of hostility. We regard that sacred voice with attention; but no one is a stranger to the part all good men take in your revolution. As the sentiment relates to question and principle, there is no neutrality. The virtuous and the wise through all ranks of society are enlisted with you! 'Tis vice, ignorance, and cowardice, that alone oppose the empire of truth and independence, or shrink from the common cause of human nature.

"Firm and steady friends you will ever find in the republican sons of Columbia, whose most earnest prayers to the great Arbiter of nations, is, and will be, that the liberties of both of our countries may remain incorruptible and immortal;—that the world may see, in their example and prosperity, the paths of social improvement, and the inestimable prize of virtuous exertion.

"Permit us, worthy citizen, to express to you our highest esteem for your person and character, our sincerest wishes in general for your personal happiness and prosperity, and in particular, that you may long fulfil the duties of your exalted station, so as to merit the approbation of your own heart, and to secure the plaudit of your constituents.

THE ANSWER.

CITIZEN GENET.

Minister Plenipotentiary of the French Republic, To the REPUBLICANS of NEW YORK.

FROM the first moment of my arrival on this continent, I wished for an opportunity to pay a visit to our Republican brethren of New-York, and greet them with the embrace of fraternal affection. Important and urgent business has prevented me from executing sooner this my favourite design—but it now fills me with the greatest joy, that I am at last enabled to find myself in the midst of you.

Your address, fraught with the most genuine principles of Republicanism, and with that lively sensibility which kindred feelings only can excite in the citizens of our nation towards those of another, has filled my heart with the tenderest emotions, and with sensations too strong for utterance.

"I shall transmit to my countrymen these generous effusions of your friendship; and let me ever assure you, that every sentiment it contains, will meet on their part with the most cordial reciprocity.

"On this joyful occasion, recollection ought not indeed to be tortured with the remembrance of past sufferings; but a Frenchman, at this critical juncture, cannot help animating his hopes, with the example of the long and severe trials of the citizens of New-York, and of their glorious triumph.

"May you enjoy, long, very long, the precious fruits of that triumph; may the peace, the glory, and the independence of the United States, last as long as the soil on which you tread. These are not only my individual wishes, but they are also the wishes of the country I have the honour to represent, and she has expressed them to you, in the most unequivocal manner.

"In the midst of her distresses, while you are the only Ally to whom she is entitled to look for assistance, she has preferred enjoying the spectacle of your prosperity, and calling on you to partake of all the riches of her commerce, to involving you with her in a common danger. Still she has not ceased relying on your friendship, and on all the aids which you yourselves might think in your power to afford. Still she expects from you a faithful and a punctual observance of those treaties, which she has entered into with you, in the hour of your danger, and of which she has fulfilled her part, in a manner worthy of herself.

"In this respect, I cannot interpret otherwise than you have done, the declaration of your government.—They must know, that the strict performance of treaties is the best and safest policy; they may know, that good faith alone, can insure respectability to a nation; that a pusillanimous conduct provokes insolence, and brings upon a country, those very dangers which it weakly means to avert.

There is indeed but too much reason to fear that you are involved in the general conspiracy of tyrants against liberty. They never will, they never can forgive you, for having been the first to proclaim the rights of man. But you will force them to respect you, by pursuing with firmness the only path which is consistent with your national honor and dignity.

The cause of France is the cause of all mankind, and no nation is more deeply interested than you are in its success. Whatever fate awaits her you are ultimately to share. But the cause of liberty is great and shall prevail.

And if France under a despotic yoke has been able so successfully to assert your rights, they can never again be endangered, while she is at liberty to exert in your support, that powerful arm which now defies the combined efforts of a whole world.

Accept my most grateful thanks, for your kind wishes for my personal happiness. May France, may America, may the citizens of New-York, be happy, and your wish shall be fulfilled. GENET.

AUGUST 9.

PROCEEDINGS OF YESTERDAY.

IT must have afforded the most perfect satisfaction, to the friends of order, peace, and national independence, to have been present at the meeting of the Citizens yesterday; one sentiment alone animated the assembly, which was peace to America, and a conduct friendly and impartial to the whole world; the most decided opinion, on these points, unanimously prevailed; and the explicit decision of the citizens, in relation to the same, will not fail to have the happiest influence, at the present interesting period of our national affairs; the administration of the President of the United States received the warmest, and most affectionate approbation, and it was clearly evinced that this great and virtuous patriot possesses the hearts, and confidence of his fellow-citizens; the military character of Washington is already established; his civil administration has thus far obtained applause; but the scene before us remains to be closed:——If this illustrious man shall be equally successful in establishing the neutrality, and preserving the peace of his country, his genius must be confessed to be more universal, and his character will be more perfect, than perhaps has before fallen to the lot of any man.

The proceedings were prefaced by an interesting and independent speech by Col. Troup, and the resolutions which follow, were adopted without a dissenting voice.

At a meeting of the citizens of New-York, not exceeded in number or respectability on any former occasion, assembled in pursuance of previous notice inserted in all the news-papers.

NICHOLAS CRUGER, in the Chair.

RESOLVED, That the late Proclamation, of the President of the United States, recommending a conduct friendly and impartial towards all the powers at war, was in our opinion a wise and well-timed measure of his administration, and merits our warmest approbation.

Resolved, That in our opinion, the Governor of this State is well entitled to the acknowledgments of his fellow-citizens, for his prompt and decided support of the system of Neutrality and peace enjoined by the Proclamation.

Resolved, That the interest and duty of all good citizens conspire to unite them on the present occasion, in supporting the Magistrates of our country; in their exertions to maintain peace, and to avoid the calamities of war.

Resolved, That while we cheerfully co-operate in the fulfilment of the treaties of the United States, we will cautiously avoid every measure which may be liable to interrupt the neutrality and peace of our country.

Resolved, That in our opinion, it is repugnant to the laws of the land, and injurious to the best interests of our country, for any citizen to enter on board of, or be concerned in fitting out any privateer, or letter of marque, to cruize against any nation at peace with these States; and that the friends of order and good government, are bound to discountenance, and by all lawful means to prevent the same.

Resolved, That the Chairman of this meeting, be requested to transmit copies of the preceding resolutions, signed by him, to the President of the United States, and to the Governor of this State, respectively.

By Order of the Meeting,
NICHOLAS CRUGER, CHAIRMAN.

AUGUST 10.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Cadiz to his brother here, dated June 24.

"There is a hot war with the Spaniards and French. We had accounts from Malaga of a battle being fought between the French and Spaniards; the French have defeated them, with the loss of about two thousand men, and the Spaniards left upwards of six thousand men.

"The French have got the straights blocked up at Malaga, with a strong fleet. Last week Admiral Hood stopped here with 28 sail of the line. Six of them came in and anchored: There has been several of their officers on board us.—They seem to speak very unfavourable of their expedition. Their ships in general are very indifferently manned.—

"They are to be joined by 20 sail of the line of Spaniards, which are lying here now; there are 6 ships of 120 guns, they are just waiting for orders, so I expect there will be warm work shortly.

"The Spaniards are daily bringing in some paltry prizes of the French; but get none of any consequence. The Spaniards seem in general low-spirited, and I believe they are d—mn—ly afraid of the French coming too far into their country. We have flying news of several places revolting to the French, near their lines; if that be the case, Spain will not stand it long."

AUGUST 17.

The following copy of a letter was received by Mr. Cruger, from the President of the United States, in answer to the one which Mr. Cruger wrote to the President, covering the resolutions passed by our fellow-citizens, at their meeting on the 8th inst.

To NICHOLAS CRUGER, Esq; Chairman of the Meeting of the Citizens of New-York:

SIR,

YOUR letter, conveying to me the resolutions of the citizens of New-York, at their late meeting, affords me much satisfaction.

The approving voice of my fellow-citizens can never be heard by me with indifference: That of the inhabitants of your respectable metropolis must always give particular pleasure. An unanimity so perfect, as appears to have prevailed among them, upon an occasion so interesting to our national peace and happiness, furnishes an example of good sense, moderation and patriotic virtue, which cannot cease to be remembered to their honour. Discerning in it a sure pledge of the firm and persevering support; I request you to make known to them the high sense I entertain of the dispositions they have manifested, and the complete reliance I place upon those dispositions.

I cannot omit the opportunity of publicly uniting with them in acknowledging the prompt and decided co-operation of the Governor of New-York towards the support of the neutrality of our country. The disposition hitherto shown by the chief Magistrates of the several States, in relation to this point, is a pleasing evidence of a spirit of concert for the general good, happily calculated to harmonize and invigorate all the parts of our political system. GEO. WASHINGTON.

Extract of a letter from an American gentleman of information, who has lately passed through France and the Netherlands, to his friend in Boston, dated London, June 5.

"I am very confident that the French cannot be subdued, and in case Conde and Valenciennes should be taken, the combined powers will not be a step nearer the object they aim at, than they are at present; because Lisle, and several other towns are so strongly fortified, that it is impossible they should advance into the country even were they superior in the field, which is not the case."

Capt. Gregory Powers, of the brig Hiram, arrived here last Wednesday, in 14 days from Cape-Francois, was boarded on the 31st of August, by the sloop Susannah, of New-Providence, Capt. Tucker, mounting 8 guns, off the West Caicos, who robbed the passengers of every article they had on board; they even took two yards of linen from one of them. He robbed them of about 300 joes in cash, and nearly the same in plate. Six negroes were also taken by him, two of them being favourite slaves, a girl and boy, were redeemed, at the request of the owners, by Capt. Powers, the girl for 200 dollars, and the boy for 150. Tucker had five vessels in tow, all of whom he had robbed of property. Captain Powers supposes Tucker had upwards of half a million of dollars worth of property on board, which the pickarooning miscreant had taken from distressed French families. The following is a copy of a bill of sale given by Tucker to Capt. Powers: "Received, West-Caicos, August 21st, 1793, of Capt. Gregory Powers, the sum of 108 dollars, for a negro wench, Zelia, taken by the privateer sloop Susannah, of New-Providence, out of of the brigantine Hiram, she being French property.

FRANCIS TUCKER.

Capt. Niel, of the ship Diligence, was boarded, on his passage, by the sloop Sally, Capt. Amory, of St. Kitts from Guadaloupe. Capt. Niel was taken on board the privateer, and his vessel sent into St. Kitts, where, after overhauling her, and finding no French property on board, they dismissed her.

Capt. Niel informs, that on the 26th July Admiral Gardner, with the fleet, lay in St. Kitts road, with a fleet of 100 sail of merchantmen, which were to sail, under his convoy, on the 31st for London. The Duke, a 98 gun ship, one of the above fleet, which had been dismasted at Martinique, was to sail in a few days for Halifax.

HARTFORD, August 12.

The affray that took place the other day, in the New-York Tontine Coffee-House, between some citizens of New-York, and an officer of the British frigate Boston, (who had been sent up Prize-Master of the Republican French privateer) is said to have arisen from the following circumstance:—The officer, after vociferating against the Americans as a nation, offered to bet a wager of 200 dollars, that the Boston would take the Ambuscade frigate, in the intended engagement—"and he would instantly stake the money, provided he was sure it would be safe, in this country.—Upon this Mr. Jessop knocked him down—the officer rose, and drew his sword;—he was again knocked down; then seized by the nape of the neck, and the waistband of his breeches, and tossed from the gallery into the street.—Some mercantile persons attempted to be insolent, in his behalf, but were soon hushed, by a saving glimpse of the Liberty-Cap.

NEWPORT, August 20.

A Correspondent observes, that the National Convention sometime ago considered Ambassadors and Consuls as Emissaries of Discord, privileged Spies, &c.—and to confirm this Opinion, they have now sent us Citizen Genet. Though this may not be universally true, yet it is sufficiently so, to render it necessary to watch the Agents of foreign Government with Suspicion.

Major General SIMEON MARTIN, of this Town, has been pleased to appoint Mr. Joseph Potter, of Middletown, his Second Aid-de Camp, with the Rank of Major.

Captain Bompard has presented to the New-York Tammany Society the Colours which his Frigate wore during the Engagement between the l'Embuscade and Boston.

The Merchants and others, Inhabitants of the Towns of Beverly, Plymouth, New Bedford, and several other Towns in Massachusetts, have passed sundry Resolutions expressive of a full Approbation of the President's Proclamation of Neutrality.

Capt. Howland, who lately arrived at New-Bedford, was taken by a British armed Schooner, said to be a Privateer, on his Passage from St. Marcs. The Captain of the Schooner, after putting several of his Crew on board of Capt. Howland's Vessel, ordered the Prize-Master to carry her into New-Providence. But after the Schooner left him, he rose upon the Prize-Master and Crew, retook his Vessel, and, with the Assistance of his own Men, arrived safe at New Bedford.

On the 8th Instant, arrived at Baltimore, Captain Hartley, in the Schooner Rachel, in 13 Days from Jeremie.—Capt. Hall informed Captain Hartley, that he left Aux Cayes the 20th July last, that the Mulattoes had got Possession of the Fort there, and were able to destroy the Town at their Pleasure; but it was supposed, that for their own Interest they would not destroy the Town: They were determined to proceed to Jeremie.

Agreeable to the Proclamations of the Governors of the English West-India Islands, American Vessels are permitted to carry into those Islands the following Articles only, viz. Live Stock, Lumber, Flour, Bread, Grain, Peas and Beans.

MR. BURKE lets slip no opportunity, in the House of Commons, of heaping indiscriminate abuse upon every member of the National Convention. Condorcet was some time ago asked by a friend, why he did not give him the retort courteous in the national convention. The philosopher gave no other answer, than by relating the following anecdote.

"Somebody told the duke of Orleans, when he was regent of France, during the minority of Louis XV. that a very silly parish priest had abused him most grossly in the pulpit; to which the regent, who was much above resenting the insults of fools, replied very coolly, why does the blockhead meddle with me, I am not of his pa-

try even were they superior in the field, which is not the case."

Capt. Gregory Powers, of the brig Hiram, arrived here last Wednesday, in 14 days from Cape-Francois, was boarded on the 3d of August, by the sloop Susannah, of New-Providence, Capt. Tucker, mounting 8 guns, off the West Caicos, who robbed the passengers of every article they had on board; they even took two yards of linen from one of them. He robbed them of about 300 joes in cash, and nearly the same in plate. Six negroes were also taken by him, two of them being favourite slaves, a girl and boy, were redeemed, at the request of the owners, by Capt. Powers, the girl for 100 dollars, and the boy for 150. Tucker had five vessels in tow, all of whom he had robbed of property. Captain Powers supposes Tucker had upwards of half a million of dollars worth of property on board, which the pickarooning miscreant had taken from distressed French families. The following is a copy of a bill of sale given by Tucker to Capt. Powers: Received, West-Caicos, August 1st, 1793, of Capt. Gregory Powers, the sum of 108 dollars, for a negro wench, Zelia, taken by the privateer sloop Susannah, of New-Providence, out of of the brigantine Hiram, she being French property.

FRANCIS TUCKER.

Capt. Niel, of the ship Diligence, was boarded, on his passage, by the sloop Sally, Capt. Amory, of St. Kitts & Gaudalope. Capt Niel was taken on board the privateer, and his vessel sent into St. Kitts, where, after overhauling her, and finding no French property on board, they dismissed her.

Capt. Niel informs, that on the 26th July Admiral Gardner, with the fleet, lay in St. Kitts road, with a fleet of 100 sail of merchantmen, which were to sail, under his convoy, on the 31st for London. The Duke, a 98 gun ship, one of the above fleet, which had been dismasted at Martinique, was to sail in a few days for Halifax.

HARTFORD, August 12.

The affray that took place the other day, in the New-York Tontine Coffee-House, between some citizens of New-York, and an officer of the British frigate Boston, (who had been sent up Prize-Master of the Republican French privateer) is said to have arisen from the following circumstance:—The officer, after vociferating against the Americans as a nation, offered to bet a wager of 100 dollars, that the Boston would take the Amboscade frigate, in the intended engagement—"and he would instantly stake the money, provided he was sure it would be safe, in this country.—Upon this Mr. Jessop knocked him down—the officer rose, and drew his sword;—he was again knocked down; then seized by the nape of the neck, and the waistband of his breeches, and tossed from the gallery into the street.—Some mercantile persons attempted to be insolent, in his behalf, but were soon hushed, by a saving glimpse of the Liberty-Cap.

NEWPORT, August 20.

A Correspondent observes, that the National Convention sometime ago considered Ambassadors and Consuls as Emissaries of Discord, privileged Spies, &c.—and to confirm this Opinion, they have now sent us Citizen Genet. Though this may not be universally true, yet it is sufficiently so, to render it necessary to watch the Agents of foreign Government with Suspicion.

Major General SIMEON MARTIN, of this Town, has been pleased to appoint Mr. Joseph Potter, of Middletown, his Second Aid-de Camp, with the Rank of Major.

Captain Bompard has presented to the New-York Tammany Society the Colours which his Frigate wore during the Engagement between the l'Embuscade and Boston.

The Merchants and others, Inhabitants of the Towns of Beverly, Plymouth, New Bedford, and several other Towns in Massachusetts, have passed sundry Resolutions expressive of a full Approbation of the President's Proclamation of Neutrality.

Capt. Howland, who lately arrived at New-Bedford, was taken by a British armed Schooner, said to be a Privateer, on his Passage from St. Marcs. The Captain of the Schooner, after putting several of his Crew on board of Capt. Howland's Vessel, ordered the Prize-Master to carry her into New-Providence. But after the Schooner left him, he rose upon the Prize-Master and Crew, retook his Vessel, and, with the Assistance of his own Men, arrived safe at New Bedford.

On the 8th Instant, arrived at Baltimore, Captain Hartley, in the Schooner Rachel, in 13 Days from Jeremie.—Capt. Hass informed Captain Hartley, that he left Aux Cayes the 20th July last, that the Mulattoes had got Possession of the Fort there, and were able to destroy the Town at their Pleasure; but it was supposed, that for their own Interest they would not destroy the Town: They were determined to proceed to Jeremie.

Agreeable to the Proclamations of the Governors of the English West-India Islands, American Vessels are permitted to carry into those Islands the following Articles only, viz. Live Stock, Lumber, Flour, Bread, Grain, Peas and Beans.

MARRIED.]—At Tiverton, Mr. NATHANIEL BRIGGS, jun. to Miss PATIENCE COOKE, Daughter of John Cooke, Esq.

"If all the social Virtues join'd
Can Peace and Happiness bestow,
This Man may surely hope to find,
As much as Mortals need to know."

DIED.]—Miss HANNAH GREEN, in the 19th Year of her Age, Daughter of Mr. John Green.

From a late London Paper.

MR. BURKE lets slip no opportunity, in the House of Commons, of heaping indiscriminate abuse upon every member of the National Convention. Condorcet was some time ago asked by a friend, why he did not give him the retort courteous in the national convention. The philosopher gave no other answer, than by relating the following anecdote.

"Somebody told the duke of Orleans, when he was regent of France, during the minority of Louis XV. that a very silly parish priest had abused him most grossly in the pulpit; to which the regent, who was much above resenting the insults of fools, replied very coolly, why does the blockhead meddle with me, I am not of his parish?"

The ROYALIST and REPUBLICAN.

Humourous Narrative of a Battle between an African Lion, and a North-Carolina Snapping Turtle.

[From the North Carolina Journal.]

A FAM'D Hibernian, in this curious age,
Confin'd the king of beasts within a cage;
Keeping his Majesty in durance vile—
From place to place he journied many a mile;
Travell'd thro' Chowan, Halifax and Nash,
And pocketed a deviliſh deal of cash,
Commenc'd a gentleman, and taught to play,
He grew in grace with fortune every day:
As fully eloquent, as Stentor lou',
Thus he harangu'd the ever wond'ring crowd.
Come gentlemen—behold the tweeted creature,
That e'er was modell'd by the Lords of nature.
A ſp & cle to feaſt a curious eye on—
Come gentlemen, walk up and ſee the Lion!
All beaſts confeſs'd his tyranny compleat,
And, trembling, crouch'd for mercy at his feet:
No animal his peerleſs power withſtood,
He reign'd the monarch of the foreſt wood.
Sole ſov'reign of the plain; no odds he begs
Of any beaſt that walks upon four legs.
At length a planter, in our modern days,
To ſee the mightieſt monarch in a cage
Is no new thing!—but, by the immortal gods,
If you declare this Lion like no odds
An animal I'll bring, ſhall make him roar,
And bathe that viſage with his royal gore:
Make you the wager—and behold who loſes:
Done, ſaid the maſter, for an hundred dollars!—
Off went the planter for his beaſt, ſo keen,
All wond'ring what the devil he could mean.
At length he brought—the Lion to oppoſe,
What ſeem'd "A fiddle that had feet and toes."*
Here, boaſtful wretch, behold this loggerhead,
Who never from his adverſary fled:
Sole monarch of the ſwamp—he fights his foe
With certain ſkill, and conquers at a blow,
Shew him the royal Lion, and you'll ſee
He'll reverence Kings like Prince Egalite.
Now for the fight the combatants prepare.
Now in the cage behold th'adventrous pair!
The ſcales of victory hanging in the ſkies,
Were then diſcovered by poetic eyes;
Wavering, in doubt, unknowing to ſubſide,
For Carolina's boaſt or Afric's pride.
While Tarapen, beneath his coat of mail,
Took in, ſecure, his head and legs and tail.
So when the wind blows hard, and thunders roll,
And tempeſts ſhake the world from to pole to pole:
The cautious ſailor, ſees the verging woe,
Furls up his ſails and drops the yards below,
Rides on the billows top, ſublime and vaſt;
And ſcorns, ſerene, the elemental blaſt.
Advancing firm—the monarch of the plain
Laſh'd his long tail, and rear'd his mighty mane,
Held out his princely paw—and at one thwack,
Extended Tarapen upon his back:
But free from pain, and without loſs of gore,
The Carolinian round his legs once more,
Laugh'd at the Lion's ſtrength, and mock'd his frown,
And roſe the ſtronger for the knock he got down:
'Twas thus of old—poetic fiction ſhews,
Hercides fought, and thus Anteus roſe.
Hark! from the ſkies a crackling peal of thunder!
The gods and goddeſſes look down with wonder:
'Tis a Big Turtle with the Lion ſtrives!
They never ſaw ſuch fighting in their lives.
Now let the Carolinian win—JOVE ſaid,
And ſhook the reverend honors of his head,
Whom JUPITER befriends, muſt then prevail,
So ſmiling VICTORY turns the dubious ſcale.
Leo, unknowing; whom he had to fight,
Stoop'd down his head to take a nearer ſight—
While Tarapen, firm, watching, never fear'd,
Directly ſeiz'd his neighbors by the beard:
Tartar, to bit the Lion by the jowl,
He could not diſengage him of his foul.
Clinch'd in the fleſh, each tooth with iron grip,
Like Vulcan's pincers, tore the monarch's lip:
Cloſe as a lover to his miſtreſs dear;
Cloſe as the pillory to a raſcal's ear;
Cloſe as a miſer, to a bag of joes.
So cloſe hung Tarapen to Leo's noſe.
Soon as the maſter ſaw what come to paſs;
Not Sancho griev'd ſo loudly for his aſs;
Not with more ſorrow did the Trojan dames,
Bewail their Hector dead, and Troy in flames;
Not trembling Frenchmen ſhew more rage and fear,
At the laſt tear of General Dumourier
At length, to generous pity attachin'd,
With god-like ſympathy within his mind,
The great Hibernian ey'd the fray as cruel,
In tears exclaiming, O, my beaſt! my jewel!
Then to the planter turn'd—Ah! deareſt honey,
Releaſe my Lion and receive your money!
The ſubtil hero, liking well the truce,
Receiv'd his bet, and let the Lion looſe:
Then to the mighty conqueror ſaid, Yes! go,
Enjoy your freedom in the vale below;
Ne'er may you want a wife in ev'ry place,
Some black ey'd mud nymph, for your fond embrace,
O! may your bed of laurel leaves be made,
And ſweet magnolias bloſſom round your head;
Amphibious victor! Tarapen divine!
Yours be the glory, but the wager mine!

* See "A Tour in the United States," by one Smith.—He thus deſcribes the Tarapen:—I ſaw an animal crawl behind a rock, which I could compare to nothing but a fiddle, with feet to it."—A book beneath criticiſm, and containing nothing to excite admiration, but a long liſt of noble ſubſcribers.

Is no new thing!—but, by the immortal gods,
If you declare this Lion alſo he odds,
An animal I'll bring, ſhall make him roar,
And bathe that viſage with his royal gore:
Make you the wager—and behold what follows:
Done, ſaid the maſter, for an hundred dollars!—
Off went the planter for his beaſt, ſo keen,
All wond'ring what the devil he could mean.
At length he brought—the Lion to oppoſe,
What ſeem'd "A fiddle that had feet and toes."*
Here, boaſtful wretch, behold this loggerhead,
Who never from his adverſary fled:
Sole monarch of the ſwamp—he fights his foe
With certain ſkill, and conquers at a blow,
Shew him the royal Lion, and you'll ſee
He'll reverence Kings like Prince Egalite.
Now for the fight the combatants prepare.
Now in the cage behold th'advent'rous pair!
The ſcales of vict'ry hanging in the ſkies,
Were then diſcovered by poetic eyes;
Wavering, in doubt, unknowing to ſubſide,
For Carolina's boaſt or Afric's pride.
While Tarapen, beneath his coat of mail,
Took in, ſecure, his head and legs and tail.
So when the wind blows hard, and thunders roll,
And tempeſts ſhake the world from to pole to pole:
The cautious ſailor, ſees the verging woe,
Furls up his ſails and drops the yards below,
Rides on the billows top, ſublime and vaſt;
And ſcorns, ſerene, the elemental blaſt.
Advancing firm—the monarch of the plain
Lafh'd his long tail, and rear'd his mighty mane,
Held out his princely paw—and at one thwack,
Extended Tarapen upon his back:
But free from pain, and without loſs of gore,
The Carolinian found his legs once more,
Laugh'd at the Lion's ſtrength, and mock'd his frown,
And roſe the ſtronger for the knocking down:
'Twas thus of old—poetic ſtory ſhews,
Alcides fought, and thus Anteus roſe.
Hark! from the ſkies a rattling peal of thunder!
The gods and goddeſſes look down with wonder:
'Tis a Big Turtle with the Lion ſtrives!
They never ſaw ſuch fighting in their lives.
Now let the Carolinian win—JOVE ſaid,
And ſhook the reverend honors of his head,
Whom JUPITER befriends, muſt then prevail,
So ſmiling VICT'RY turns the dubious ſcale.
Leo, unknowing, whom he had to fight,
Stoop'd down his head to take a nearer ſight—
While Tarapen, firm, watchful, never ſcar'd,
Directly ſeiz'd his highneſs by the beard:
That is, to bit the Lion by the jowl,
He could not diſengage him for his ſoul.
Clinch'd in the fleſh, each tooth with iron grip,
Like Vulcan's pincers, tore the monarch's lip:
Cloſe as a lover to his miſtreſs dear;
Cloſe as the pillory to a raſcal's ear;
Cloſe as a miſer, to a bag of joes.
So cloſe hung Tarapen to Leo's noſe.
Soon as the maſter ſaw what come to paſs;
Not Sancho griev'd ſo loudly for his aſs;
Not with more ſorrow did the Trojan dames,
Bewail their Hector dead, and Troy in flames;
Nor trembling Frenchmen ſhew more rage and fear,
At the laſt feat of General Dumourier.
At length, to generous pity all inclin'd,
With god-like ſympathy within his mind,
The great Hibernian ey'd the fray as cruel,
In tears exclaiming, O, my beaſt! my jewel!
Then to the planter turn'd—Ah! deareſt honey,
Releaſe my Lion and receive your money!
The ſubtil hero, liking well the truce,
Receiv'd his bet, and let the Lion looſe:
Then to the mighty conqueror ſaid, Yes! go,
Enjoy your freedom in the vale below;
Ne'er may you want a wife in ev'ry place,
Some black ey'd mud nymph, for your fond embrace,
O! may your bed of laurel leaves be made,
And ſweet magnolias bloſſom round your head;
Amphibious victor! Tarapen divine!
Yours be the glory, but the wager mine!

* See "A Tour in the United States," by one Smith.—He thus deſcribes the Tarapen:—"I ſaw an animal crawl behind a rock, which I could compare to nothing but a fiddle, with feet to it."—A book beneath criticiſm, and containing nothing to excite admiration, but a long liſt of noble ſubſcribers.
